Senator Grover, Independent, Tells How Portland Democrats Have Defeated Their Candidates—Manning Contest—Election Returns.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE MORNING OREGONIAN.

OMAHA, Nov. 20.—Senator Grover, of Oregon, who passed through this city this afternoon en route for Washington, told a reporter that the democratic factionists of the coast are gratified over the success of their party in the west and he is able to supply us with a democratic majority in Congress, while the same cannot be said to be true of Oregon, should the latter not be counted. Politicians in California and Nevada already speak of nominating governor Grover Cleveland for President in 1884, if the latter should decline to run for re-election as governor of New York. Grover, however, is by no means a candidate for the office of Governor of Oregon, and will be found in the front rank of the democratic battle when the presidential campaign opens.

Fraudulently Concealed.

JACKSON, Nov. 20.—Lodge Democrats and citizens generally continue their fight on Secretary of State Henry Myers and governor Lowrie on awarding a certificate to Van B. Manning upon a clerical error in the tally sheet. The two commissioners of election of Yale county have telegraphed that the error of Chambless appearing on the tally sheet is a clerical error, and should have been I. E. Chambless. A corrected tally sheet, with certificate, have been forwarded to the secretary of state.

Who Chambless Is.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Van B. Manning, to whom a certificate of election to congress from the second district of Montana is claimed to belong, is in Washington. It is stated that J. B. Chambless is a resident of Yale county and a greenback politician, and that the vote cast for him defeated Geneva Chalmers Manning by only a few votes. In the event of Chambless's qualification to serve in the house of representatives, it is supposed he will pursue a just policy and make no unfair use of his election contests.

A New Democratic Indorser.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—In a letter to the state Forcibles, the battalion which tendered its services as an escort upon the occasion of the inauguration of Governor-elect Pattison, that gentleman says: "There is a conviction in the minds of the people of all oath by a citizen-caller, by the people to execute a public trust should be made the occasion for excess of pageantry and consumption. I am determined that so far as I can control the matter my inauguration as governor shall not cost the people of Pennsylvania a dollar.

Total Vote of Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 20.—The total vote for governor in the recent election was 475,861. Pattison's plurality was 26,292. This is the largest vote ever polled in the state, with the exception of the presidential contests of 1876 and 1880.

Favors Senator Hoar.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Gen. Francis A. Walker publishes a card saying that he is not a candidate for the senatorship nor for any political office and that he is wholly and heartily in favor of the re-election of Senator Hoar.

Arkansas Returns.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 20.—Returns from the state, with the late of a small county, show for congressman at large Breckenridge, democrat, elected by a large majority.

Train Wreckers Arrested.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—B. A. King, special detective from this city, and Jos. Harris, detective of the S. P. R. R. arrested yesterday at San Gregorio pass a woman named Lucy Tristan and her two sons, aged 16 and 18, for attempting to wreck the passenger train on Sunday night last. The capture was a very clever piece of detective work. The parties are supposed to be the same who have been the perpetrators of the several attempts to wreck trains that have occurred at that point during the past three years. The woman Tristan was the cause of her neighborhood and her arrest is greeted with much delight by her neighbors.

The object in wrecking the train was plunder, the younger boy having made a confession to that effect. The officers are in possession of other evidence which will, it is thought, be sufficient to convict them

The Daily Oregonian.

TUESDAY MORNING, NOV. 25, 1884.

THE CALLER SCHOOL MEETING.

It is to be regretted that arrangements were not made for a public hall in the city which could be used for that purpose. The hall now occupied by the Academy of Music is not in either of the legal voters of the school district, and cannot be called for this evening, at which meeting it is understood, such proposition as has been made will be presented and the sense of the district taken as to whether the block shall be sold and, if so, at what price. This is a very important matter, and may affect the city in many important ways. It appears to be the general impression that the sale should be made, if a good sum can be realized; and in this opinion THE OREGONIAN concurs. As it said some days ago, there are several reasons why the proper should be considered. First, it is believed that a very liberal price can be obtained. Second, a block situated farther away from the business center of the city would be more suitable for a school. Third, the central school building, as it now stands, is old-fashioned and inconvenient; it consists mainly of patchwork and "additions," and is [illegible] shelter from the rain. Fourth, a more suitable block for a school can be bought for $25,000 or $30,000, and a first-class modern building can be erected for $50,000, which, if a price equal to or approaching that which it is supposed can be had for the present property shall really be offered, would leave a handsome profit in cash for the exchange, besides other striking advantages. Fifth, the school should get a magnificent mound in an excellent locality, and one of the great wants of the city—a first-class hotel—would be supplied. Finally, the erection of such a hotel building—costing not less than $300,000—would be a prodigious stimulus to the growth of the city, assuring other investments and improvements to a far greater aggregate amount. There seems to be every reason for acceptance of an offer for the block, should the offer prove to be a liberal one, and none against it beyond the possible difficulty of making temporary provision for the children attending the central school; and it is believed that this can be arranged with little delay. No doubt there will be full attendance at the school meeting this evening at the court house, at half-past seven o'clock.

TOO MUCH POLITICS.

For the next two years the chief object kept in view by politicians and political organs throughout the country will be the making of a president to succeed Mr. Arthur. "To the victor belong the spoils" is an axiom which creates no end of disturbance in our politics. Besides it eats [illegible] It shifts the business, social and moral life of the country. There ought to be a change in our fundamental law making the presidential term six years and the incumbent ever after ineligible to the position. Then, if it could be so arranged, it would add to the strength of the government and give more assurance of the prosperity of the country if all good and faithful officers appointed by the executive, except his cabinet, could hold office under his successor. would not be turned out, except for good cause, and that all over state and county elections could be held on the same day on which we vote for president. We have too many elections; too much electioneering; too much wire pulling; too much lying, buy ing and selling of votes and places; in short, too much of bitter-day politics.

The presidency, with all the patronage it wields, is a prize so great and brilliant that while true patriotism is and should be stirred by it, selfish ambition, cupidity, demagogueism and all the baser, meaner passions of the mind are brought into play and the campaign becomes a contest between these elements of society for place, power and pelf. The public temper is now such as to encourage the hope that the next candidates presented for these high places may be brought out by the people and not by the politicians, and that they will be men whose hands are free from the stains which mar the characters of so many of the so-called statesmen of the day. "Like rulers like nations," was an old-world adage, which would be more nearly true in this country were it rendered "Like wire pullers, like candidates." The republican party has shown by its courage in the late elections its purpose to rid itself of this sort of thing; and the democratic party should profit largely by studying and applying this example.

HIGH LICENSE AT PENDLETON.

The temperance movement in Pendleton, in Umatilla county, under local option, seems to be a success in that they abandon the temperance question as it is and not as it ought to be. Generally when people become enthusiastic on the temperance reform question, they organize a church and, get together a church, who being a really temperance need not to be reformed, and talk of the evils of intemperance. The fabulous statistics of victims in the grave of rum is a tale of darkened homes of ill-gotten hopes, of wailing widows, of manhood lost and ruin, which company of women which attend and follow this drunkenness are recited. To these horrors are added, perhaps, some statistics showing that enough whisky is drunk annually in the United States to float a fleet of war ships, and of the leader happens to be a physician any conscientious making a reputation for great learning, a set of nauseating pictures of the human body, much illustrating the stages of its degradation through the degrees of debauchery. They then having aired their eloquence and the room having wept a little, the meeting adjourns and the crowd goes home, and the nearest temperance organ in its next issue reports this: The people are remaking a holy war on rum and alcohol. The like of this is useless. An agitation which only agitates people who do not need to be reformed is worse than useless. As to saloons, and we see good men and good women working earnestly in honest but foolish efforts of this sort, A little more reflection and a little less sentiment would do well.

But the temperance people of Pendleton are going about the matter in a different and a practical way. They recognize in intemperance a giant evil. They would if they could do away with the liquor traffic altogether, but heeding that means of experience elsewhere, they know this to be impossible. They know that if men cannot buy liquor openly they will do it in private, and that illicit traffic is the most dangerous form of the liquor evil. Knowing that the evil cannot be uprooted, they propose to check its growth and to contract its field. And with this purpose they have by their city council enacted an ordinance putting the price of saloon licenses at $1000 per year. A few temperance people at Pendleton protest against this law, claiming that there can be no "half way legislation," and that any license to sell liquor is a license of vice. It is objected to by many saloon men on the ground that the license fee is greater than for any other business of equal value, and particularly that it overstrains against [illegible] and puts a monopoly into the hands of the rich.

To the protesting temperance people it may be said that by putting all saloons on liquor selling, Pendleton has not [illegible] any. Nor is any tax whatever upon the liquor business in itself a restrictive measure, and as such some extent a restrictive measure, and as such a step in the direction of reform. The history of "no license" in Ohio ought to teach a lesson. No license or very low license allows the liquor traffic to run riot; high license makes the saloons few in number, puts them in the hands of responsible men and sets a guard upon illicit traffic. Every man who pays a thousand-dollar license fee will see to it that his neighbor on the cellar floor who has no license is not carrying on an illicit traffic. Thus the liquor business is made to protect the public against itself. A license so high as to be effect prohibitory, is of course the same as a prohibitory law, and like a prohibitory law it soon becomes a dead letter. Either the traffic becomes illicit or the law lies dead on the statute book and is openly violated. Experience everywhere shows that the point of greatest restriction of the liquor traffic is the point of greatest revenue resulting from it.

To the prohibitionist objection it may be said that if the liquor traffic is taxed proportionately higher than other kinds of business, this only just because it is the source and promoter of evils which cost the state vast sums. And in taking the business away from poor men and putting it into the hands of the rich, it is a thing to be desired. A traffic so dangerous ought to be in the hands of men financially responsible. The "drive" element in the whisky trade is the worst in it, and high license would do away with much of it. Where high license has been tried, it has worked great benefits. We hope the mayor of Pendleton will sign the ordinance now in his hands, and that the officers will have the nerve to execute it.

Complete management is very much wanted in the Portland postoffice. There are complaints on every hand. In fact the whole postal service of the state has been demoralized and degraded to serve the interests of politicians; and a the Portland office, which is the central point of the service of the north west, the worst faults appear. For years past the postal service of this part of the country has been becoming more and more the managing bureau of a boss politician. Now this he is entered, it would be well to reorganize the service and put it on a basis of proper efficiency for forwarding and distributing the mails. But perhaps the postmaster of Portland, who is receiving censures from so many quarters, is not up very much to be blamed. Knowing that he was appointed for political service, he has been faithfully attending to his duty as he understands it. The author of the complaint from Olympia should remember that at the time when his letter was dictated here the postoffice was especially busy with the preliminaries of the senatorial election.

The rainfall in southern Oregon this fall and winter has been liberal, and the miners hope for a good season's work. Mining operations will be carried on energetically. The farmers of Jackson county will find extraordinary and profitable markets at the railroad camps next year. The region was never so prosperous as now, nor its prospects ever before so bright.

The rapidity with which the inland empire is being settled up is shown by a paragraph in a local paper, saying casually that twelve persons from the east "dropped in" in one day with the purpose of settling.

Cheney, Spokane Falls and Sprague are the rival towns of Spokane county. At the recent election Cheneyites 336 votes, Spokane Falls 335 and Sprague 231.

A railroad planned from The Dalles south through Wasco, Crook and Lake counties would tap a wonderfully rich country.

Democrats Dancing on a Volcano.

Cleveland Leader, Rep.

It is amusing to see the complacency, nay, even delight, with which democrats look upon the growing strength and independence of the reform element of the republican party. In the real or assumed assurance of temporary benefits from the present against what is known as the "machine" republicans they are blind to the fact that they are encouraging and applauding a movement which in utter ly unsafe to democracy and which tolerated a current in public opinion destined to crush nally party of the last vestige of Bourbonism away [illegible] defeat.

AN INTERESTING INQUIRY.

In a volume on "Coal; its History and Uses," lately issued by Macmillan & Co., of London, some interesting and significant facts are given concerning the present and prospective coal supply of Great Britain. The coal produced in the United Kingdom in the year 1880 was equal to the combined energy of three thousand million adult laborers. The product amounted to about 150,000,000 tons. The available coal of Great Britain at a less depth than four thousand feet, is placed at 145,500,000,000 tons; a sum so large as to give no cause of alarm for the future; but this assurance is in a great degree removed when it is considered that the production is increasing in a geometrical ratio that doubles the output every twenty years. This rate of increase would make the annual product in the year 1936 more than one thousand million tons, which, if continued, would exhaust the coal fields in less than one hundred and fifty years. But of course it is not probable that the consumption will go on increasing in this ratio. Yet the conclusion reached in this book is that the manufacturing supremacy of the United Kingdom can be maintained only by increasing the consumption of coal as rapidly as possible, and that as soon as economy in the use of coal becomes necessary, regardless of how large the store of unmined coal may be, the sceptre of industrial power must depart to more favored lands. But who can tell whether there may not in the meantime be new application of forces which may to a great extent supply the want of coal?

A year or more ago this journal published a review of the translation of Virgil's Æneid by Capt. Henry H. Pierce, U. S. A. It would be difficult to say too much in praise of that excellence of this unique version. It follows the original closely, yet has a rapid movement, and is distinguished from all other versions by a rhythmic flow which is sustained throughout. It is believed there are many persons within the range of THE OREGONIAN'S circulation who would be glad to possess this book. To all such we offer it with the WEEKLY OREGONIAN. The price of the book is $2, but it may be had with the paper for 75 cents. That is the weekly will be furnished one year together with a copy of the book, for $2 75. Here is a fine opportunity to obtain or renew an acquaintance, at nominal cost, with the Mantuan, whom Tennyson in a recent poem extolled as "monarch of the stately measure ever formed by lips of man."

Political justice isn't always so swift as in the case of Chalmers of Mississippi. He is counted out by a trick which resembles that by which he counted out Lynch two years ago. A republican house righted that wrong and seated Chalmers home. Enraged at his democratic associates in congress he cast "they wouldn't be made right" for him in support of the fraud he went back to Mississippi as an independent, defeating the regular Democratic candidate. But the manipulators of the returns have now counted him out, on about as shabby a pretense as he himself employed to count Lynch out, and a democratic house, to punish him for "balling," will pretty certainly refuse him the seat to which he is at this time elected. Chalmers is already making many wry faces over the bitterness of his own medicine.

THE DYING YEAR.

"Memory—Hope—Love—Regret—Farewell!
"Think of these all—remember nothing
"Peace to the dead—all else
But Christ our Lord Omnipotent—Nay
Think—Christ Lives.

"Thank—Life—for the sweet—the sour
For the dark—the bright—Nay
But for Christ's sake—Nay
Think—Christ Lives.

"Think of Death—the night—the day
On the storm—the calm—Nay
But the Lamb's Lamb—Nay
Think—Christ Lives.

"Think of Death—the sailing away
Past the ports—the quay—Nay
Think—the Saving Voice—Peace—Nay
Think of Living.

Living, Living, glad, or lorn,
On God's Word relying
Pray He bring you safe for both—
Living, Dying!

A NEVADA MAN'S BATHING STORY.

Carson City Appeal.

Sam Davis tells a racy story of his experience at Santa Monica, the new summer resort of Southern California. "I was down in that section a few months ago," said Sam, "and pretty near starved when I fell in with Jones, the senator, and told him my condition. He fell right up prompt, for the restaurant men told me he could give me a job."

"I want a lot of men to keep in the water all day to show visitors how delightful surf bathing is. You see those people from the east have a sort of prejudice against the Pacific ocean and I want to counteract the feeling. I want you to toss eight men and keep 'em tumbling around in the billows, the sport of the laughing sea—men who can run out on the beach every ten minutes and tell how warm the water is."

"Well, I caught the idea, and agreed to furnish the crowd for $30 a day, and we closed the bargain. I hired eight men at $1 a day to bathe there all the afternoon, and I pocketed the balance. I got a green and blue striped suit, with the flag of the union across the stomach, and rushed about stooping the gang alive. The second day they struck for $8 because the water was so cold.

"I tried to reason about the trade winds and harvest moon tide, but they wanted the money all the same. They three quit, but Jones didn't mix 'em and it kept even financially. Then two froze to death right on the beach, and I had to get a coroner's jury to find a verdict from over-bathing of the watch. The balance of the gang left and I had to go it alone.

"I got so inured to the cold that I could rush out of the water skip up to the English tourists and tell 'em it was just lovely and keep my teeth still all the while. I got my $20 every night and spent it all for warm drinks. Then I quit, as my constitution was giving way.

"When I left behind eight Irishmen on the railroad doing the bathing for the hotel, and they had a fine going all the while back of some rocks, where the men could warm up between swims. That is a great climate down there."

A few years ago a venerable Mussulman was to be seen daily in the cool of the evening taking his solitary drive along the sea beach at Madras in his palanquin carriage. Of course, he was looked upon as a genuine son of the Prophet, until one day he was taken aback, as many people are, by the exorbitant demand made upon him in European shops for some European article. His indignant feelings laughed at his disguise and asserted their nationality in the strong Scotch expression: "Gude save us! it's no worth a bawbee!" When on my way home, and when on board a small Turkish steamer in the bay of Alexandria, we were having our luggage passed by two Turkish customs officers. I examined the features of one of them, and ventured to say to my friend Major F., standing beside me: "If I were a betting man, I would stake something on that Turk being a Scotchman." The official heard me, and, with a cunning leer, he turned to his companion and, evidently for my satisfaction, addressed him in the broadest Aberdonian dialect.—Chambers' Journal.

A statistical writer says: Rhode Island has furnished more men of national reputation for inherent ductility than any other northern state. Wild Bill was born in Providence. "Billy, the Kid," of recent cowboy renown, came originally from Watch Hill; and "Calamity Jane" is a native of fashionable Newport. "Texas Jack," for whom, like Homer, seven cities claim the honor of his birth, was born in Bristol, and "Yellowstone Kelley," the scout of Montana, is a native of Pawtucket. It is difficult to find a border ruffian who did not come from Rhode Island. If you don't believe this read the Providence Sunday papers and see what sort of editors they have there.

In one of the English law courts the then well-known counsel, Mr. Phillimore, was pleading against Sergt. Something, socially his bosom friend, forensically his deadly enemy. It was a case of the theft of some donkeys, and there was a dispute as to the number and sex of the animals. The judge got bothered and testily asked: "How many asses were there in the plaintiff's stable on the night of the robbery?" "Three, my lud" answered the sergeant: "two mares and a colt." "Nay, my lud, four," put in the opposing advocate, "four donkeys in all." "Ay, yes, true! I beg your lordship's and my learned brother's pardon." He reminds me that there were four donkeys present—two mares and colt, and one Ally-more."—London Society.

One of the most prominent preachers tells the following anecdote as a fact whenever he hears a story too incredible for belief: "A very wicked man became converted and in course of time it came his turn to pray in class meeting. Not being used to speaking in public, of course he was very much embarrassed. This is the substance of the prayer: 'Oh Lord, thou giver of all good things, look down with pity on poor people. You are rich and can spare them plenty to eat while on earth. Send every one of them a full barrel of flour, plenty of lard and a side of bacon a ham or so and a pound of butter. Send each one of your starving, hungry creatures a barrel of sugar, a barrel of salt, a barrel of pepper—oh, he I, that's too much pepper. Amen.'"—Centreville (Md.), Record.

A gigantic negro, who had crippled up half the police force in their efforts to secure him, was brought from the jail up the office of the justice for trial. Not observing the, the accused had any counsel employed, the justice asked: "Don't you want a lawyer to defend you?" The accused glared at the justice, and pounding on the table roared out: "I don't need anybody ter defend me. I kin defend myself against a dozen sich lookin' men as you is. If you don't believe me, come out in de back yard and see if you ain't'd man what needs ter be defended."—Texas Siftings.

I saw so much said about the merits of Hop Bitters on my wife, who was always suffering, and never well, that I was much to get her something from which to be benefitted much, and am glad I did for it has taken two months' use of it. Differs my wife was cured and she has remained so for eight years months since. I feel such thanksgiving.—H. F. St. Paul Pioneer Press.
